A: It seems to be the black screen that you get when you connect Windows to a corrupt QuickBooks Direct Connect Server using the Services utility. There is an article written by Keith C. Edwards about this issue. The article is available here. When the error occurs Cause: The Direct Connect server DB is corrupt (for example, due to an error in the database restoration) or corrupt due to a problem in the server (for example, a bad memory card or a crash). This is most likely caused by a problem in the Direct Connect server manager. Apparently QuickBooks fixes this error by reinstalling the Direct Connect Server Manager, please follow the below steps to fix it: Download and run QuickBooks Desktop Manager from If the installer detects a corrupted Direct Connect database, the installer will display the message "Corrupted Direct Connect Database" and will ask you to download and install QuickBooks Desktop Manager again. Click OK. Select the "Reset" button. When the "Reset" button appears, select the "Confirm" button. Click "OK". Select the "Install Now" button. Select "Run Microsoft SQL Server" in the list of available applications. Click the Next button. Select "SQL Server Express" in the list of available databases. Click the Next button. In the Database Name box, enter DirectConnectDB (if the name isn't displayed in the box, then select Allocate Memory button and then enter DirectConnectDB in the box). If the database name has a space at the end, then remove the space. Click the Next button. Select "DirectConnectDB.MDF" in the list of databases. Click the Next button. Click the Install button. Click the Install button. When the message "Congratulations, the installer has finished successfully" appears, click the OK button. The corrected DirectConnect database should be used. All of the QuickBooks Windows services should then start. A: I had this same error and had to run: C:\Windows\System32\svchost.exe -k netsvcs Then go to the service: Then
